"The closing of the tragic cycle by the coming of the foreboding calamities can be averted if the inhabitants of earth will repent, believe and have faith in God as our Heavenly Father, in His Son Jesus Christ as our redeemer, and will conform to their teachings," he said.

Only in this manner can the tragic cycle which caused the downfall of so many civilizations be averted, according to President Romney.

The work of Joseph Smith and the divinity of the Book of Mormon was the subject of Elder Mark E. Peterson's conference talk Saturday morning.

"Joseph was the instrument through whom the true Church and Kingdom of God were again restored to earth," Elder Peterson said. "He brought forth the Book of Mormon which he translated by the gift and power of God."

Comparing present conditions to the time of Noah, resident Romney also cited some of the prophecies of last days in his talk.

Why does a BYU coed rise at 4 a.m. to hurriedly dress, grab a glass of juice and sit, cramped in a car with seven other people for an hour? Then she arrives at a crowded Temple Square, only to stand in a line for four and a half more hours. Finally the treasured prize is in sight, a stuffy, people-packed tabernacle, she sits for two more hours and repeats the whole process again the next day.

Or what makes the 18-year-old student in London work to earn and save money for a year, to travel half way across the world and stand in that same line to see the face of a man he has only read about before?

The answers are as varied as the throngs of people who swarm Temple Square for Conference weekend.

For Janet Longely the thrill of her first conference woke her at 4 a.m., anxious for the day to begin. Having stood in line since 6:15 a.m., she and her friends, Diane Murphy and Janet Troy, take it in their stride.

"We've prayed all morning that we'll get in so we will!" says Miss Longely confidently. "Faith precedes the miracle!" interjects Diane. While Janet Troy laughs and comments, "Standing in line at BYU has prepared us for this. We feel sorry for those poor people who aren't used to standing in line."

Jan Larsen, daughter of Elder Dean Larsen, "gave up her privileges to come with us," says her Sunday School teacher, Jim Snow. As a General Authority's daughter Jan, a pert blonde, is allowed to sit in a special section. Her Sunday School coming as a class project was something that Jan couldn't pass up. "I love the spirit of being here with them," she says:

"It is so exciting to be here and to see the Prophet Spencer W. Kimball. He is so inspiring and gentle," says Akira Ogata, a Japanese student studying English here at BYU until December. One girl takes a nap between sessions Sunday in the lazy afternoon sun.

The remarks of Elder David B. Haight of the Quorum of the Twelve Apostles Sunday were directed to the young women of the church.

Members of the Church heard Sunday from General Authorities concerning subjects ranging from a father's responsibility to spiritual light.

President N. Eldon Tanner, speaking Sunday morning, talked about the light of God and its influence in the lives of members of the church.

"Every individual has the right and can have the light of Christ in his life as an abiding influence," President Tanner said.

"We have a prophet of God upon the Earth today through whom God speaks to man just as he did in former days, and as we accept his counsel, we will receive further light and knowledge," he said.

Young women have a responsibility to make sure the men they are dating make themselves worthy to serve the Lord on missions, according to Elder Haight.

"I challenge you young women of the Church who associate with and date our young priesthood bearers to become real guardians of their morality," Elder Haight

"On a date you can set the proper atmosphere to encourage your companion to honor the commandments of God," he added.

"You need not dress in the fashion of the world. The day will come when the world will dress after the way of the Church. Your influence with young men is important. You encourage Church standards and dress and conduct," he said.

"Parents have a particular responsibility to teach their children the importance of following the light and avoiding the darkness. This applies to both their spiritual and physical surroundings. It is a fact that most evil is perpetrated under cover of darkness," President Tanner said.

He said couples should avoid dangerous situations at night or when spending "too much" time together.

"There is a lurking power of emotion that can override intellect. Permissiveness never produced greatness," he said.

Speaking in the Sunday afternoon session, Elder L. Tom Perry of the Quorum of the Twelve stressed the responsibilities of fathers in the Lord's plans.

"I stand before you today to accuse many of the husbands and fathers who are within the sound of my voice and throughout the world of failing in their two major God-given responsibilities," Elder Perry said.

According to Elder Perry, the two responsibilities are those of being a good husband and father.

"Divorce, infidelity, dishonesty, the use of drugs, deterioration of family life, loss of idenity, insecurity and unhappiness have resulted from your lack of leadership in the home," he stressed.

Priesthood holders in over 1,241 separate locations including the Marriott Center heard the direct wire broadcast of the Priesthood session of General Conference Saturday night.

There, they heard President Kimball stress forgiveness and love for all men and races.

He told of a young man, while, during a truce, walked across a "no man's land" and asked if there was a Mormon elder in the enemy lines. One was, and they returned to the first soldier's side, where they administered to a wounded soldier. "All men should be able to forgive in their quest for perfection," President Kimball said.
"We must learn to forgive to be forgiven," he added.

"The Lord never promised an easy road or a simple Gospel," he said. "The world is still beautiful. It is man who is off-center," he added.

sionaries took him to soccer games, slipping in the Gospel principles along the way. Now, he plays for BYU's junior varsity team.

Ted Yan, BYU student and a native of Hong Kong, enjoys conference from two views that not many people get to see. He is a translater in his native Cantonese language and a photographer for the International Club. "It is exciting to see conference from a different side. You don't have the same spirit on T.V. as you do really being here," he comments.

Gives up lunch

When others are giving up money and time to come to conference, Kathleen Lowel, a waitress at the Hotel Utah, gives up her lunch to hear the words of the General Authorities.

"It's the only way I can get in the morning session,

"It's the only way I can get in the morning session, and I wouldn't miss it," she states. A vibrant, outgoing girl, Kathleen adds, "This is my third time to come to conference and it's still just as exciting."

"When I was a little boy in Boise, Idaho, Bishop Featherstone was my Stake President," recalls David Mefford." He told us then that he would tome to conference and look at the faces of the General Authorities. Then he would go home and try to put that same look on his and his children's faces by his actions. It has made him a General Authority. Maybe someday if I look and try to follow his same path I can become a General Authority."

All the way from Tonga

President Pita Fhopoate of the Nukualofa-Tonga East Stake in Tonga has a very specific reason to be at conference. "I must listen carefully because I am the only one to take it back to all those people." His stake of 2,000 people is one of the fastest growing in the church.

Henry Hinonaka, Japanese born, has only been at BYU a month and was elated at the thought his first conference. Those that are so close to the core of the church take it for granted," he said. "All these people that have come from all over the world, I am so lucky to be so close. I thought I should take advantage of it," he grins. By the time Henry had been at the BYU Hawaii campus for a year he was really curious about the church and BYU. He had built up a testimony of the church within weeks of arriving at BYU and was soon baptised. With a grin that lights up his whole face, Henry exclaims, "Knowing the truth makes all the difference in my life."

Caught in a side corner beneath the organ, Paul H. Dunn speaks of what he would wish to tell the BYU students. "Pause and enjoy," he says with a smile. "The students don't have so much to worzy about as they think. When they think the world is coming in on them, it really isn't."

Inside, a distinguished white-haired man walks to his chair to the spontaneous swells of "We Thank Thee Oh God For A Prophet."

THAT ANY MINUTE YOU MAY PASS OUT!

Though the answers are many as to why each person on Temple Square sacrificed what he or she did to be there, the spirit of each answer is typified in that simple scene as President Kimball entered the tabernacle. To feel the spirit of the Lord and the testimony that radiates through him strengthens each person in the room.

First, according to President Benson, is to live a morally clean life. Quoting from the prophet Alma, he declared that wickedness never was, nor never will be true happiness.

Only through keeping the commandments of the Lord will mankind obtain true happiness, he said.

"You cannot do wrong and feel right. It is impossible," President Benson said.

Youth can avoid the heavy burden of sin by heeding the standards laid down through the teachings of the Lord's servants, especially moral purity, he said.

Second on the list is to stay close to one's parents, according to President Benson.

of today's Gomorrah LDS leaders warn

By DARYL GIBSON and KENT RAPPLEYE Universe Staff Writers

A call to repentance and the appointment of three new members of the First Quorum of Seventy highlighted the 147th Semi-annual conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints Saturday and Sunday.

'Wisdom of age'

The call to repentance was issued by President Spencer W. Kimball, 82-year old leader of the almost four million members of the church worldwide
President Kimball stated that the world situation was worsening and that mankind must repent to be saved.

In his closing address Sunday afternoon, the prophet also said, "This has been a great conference. I have listened with great attention and have made up my mind that I shall go home and be a greater man than I have ever been before."

The callings of the new members to the ranks of the church's general authorities were announced at the first of President Kimball's Saturday morning talk (see story below).

"There are some things which come only with mature adulthood, and one of these is wisdom. Young people, you need the wisdom of age, just as some of us older ones need your enthusiasm for life," he said.

Third, he added, was to "'Watch and pray always, lest ye enter into temptation."

"You can live in the world and not partake of the sins of the world." President Benson said. "You can live life joyously, beautifully, unmarred by the ugliness of sin." In another talk, Marion G. Romney, second counselor in the First Presidency of the Church, stressed keeping the commandments.

"If the prevailing course of men and nations is not changed," he said, "It will culiminate in a cataclysmic disaster."

President Romney went on to tell of the "tragic cycle," as he called it, that the world has fallen into.

The cycle, which was the basis for President Romney's talk, is similar to the one that the Roman, Jaredite and Nephite nations fell into which eventually caused their destruction.

"Civilizations rise as their people comply with the laws upon which prosperity, success and happiness depend," he said. "These laws God revealed in the beginning and, through His prophets, He has repeated them in every dispensation since."

Hands are raised in unison as those in attendance at the Saturday afternoon sess Authorities of the Church. There was only one dissenting vote at the session.

Build 'reservoirs of faith'

President Kimball spoke on subjects ranging from personal journals to moral crimes in his half-hour long opening talk, calling for the saints to build "reservoirs of faith" in their lives.

With adequate storage of faith, he stressed, members of the church can stand firm and strong in the face of the world's temptations.

He compared the present world situation to that of Babylon and Sodom and Gomorrah.

"Are we not inviting eventual destruction as we desecrate all things holy and sacred, even to the common and irreverent use in our daily talk of the names of Diety and make his Holy Day, the Sabbath, a day of work, commercialism and pleasure seeking," President Kimball said.

He went on to say that the only way to have peace and righteousness in the land is to keep the commandments given to Moses on Mt. Sinai.

Keeping these commandments includes staying away from the sins of pornography, obscenity, immorality, vandalism and general crime.

"We hear more and more each day about the sins of adultery, homosexuality and lesbianism," President

"There is today a strong clamor to make such practices legal by passing legislation. Some would also legislate to legalize prostitution. They have legalized abortion, seeking to remove from the heinous crime the stigma of sin.

"We do not hesitate to tell the world that the cure for these evils is not in surrender," President Kimball said. He added that social acceptance of an act does not change the status of an act, nor make it less wrong in the sight of the Lord.

"If all the people in the world were to accept homosexuality... the practice would still be deep, dark sin, he said.

President Kimball also stressed observing the law of chastity, keeping the speed limit and other laws.

"The growing permissiveness in modern society gravely concerns us," he said, calling on church members to "renew their efforts to strengthen the home."

Parents can strengthen the family ties by holding family home evening, and making sure that family members have their own scriptures, according to President Kimball.

Other addresses were also given during the two-day conference. Kimball said. "Homosexuality is an ugly sin, but because of its prevalence, the need to warn the uninitiated and the desire to help those who may already be involved with it, it must be brought into the open. It is the sin of the ages," he added.

In an address entitled "A Message to the Rising Generation," President Ezra Taft Benson of the Quorum of the Twelve called upon the youth of the world to "be fit and pure vessels to bear off the kingdom of God triumphant in preparation for the second coming of our Savior."

Concluding the Saturday afternoon session, President Benson told young people of the church that they were a select group of spirits.

"You are not just ordinary men and women," President Benson said. "You are choice spirits. Many of you have been held back in reserve for almost 6,000 years to come forth in this day, at this time, when the temptations, responsibilities and opportunities are the very greatest." President Benson's message

President Benson set forth several guidelines for the youth of the world to follow to obtain a full and rewarding life.

President Kimball, world leader of nearly four million church members, announced the appointments in the opening general session of the conference. They were later sustained in the afternoon by the conference as members of the Quorum of the Seventy.

General Authorities of the Church serve fulltime during their lifetime in various capacities. The members of the First Quorum of the Seventy are directed to assist the Twelve Apostles in "buliding up the Church and regulating all the affairs of the same in all nations," according to the revelations to Joseph Smith.

nere are, at present, 63 General Authorities of the Church.

Eleven members of the First Quorum of the Seventy reside outside the United States as Area Supervisors.

typical freshman hassles. campus 'Another celebrity experiencing

Johnny Whitaker, who 'always wanted to come to BYU' helps another campus celebrity pour whitewash on Y Day.

By DONNA FOLLET Monday Magazine Writer

How many 17-year-olds do you know who could use a personal secretary just to handle their phone calls?

BYU has another celebrity on campus. On the surface, he is like any other freshman. You may, however, do a double-take if you happen to cross paths with John Orson Whitaker, Jr.

Better known as Johnny Whitaker, Jody Davis or om Sawyer, the cute, curly-haired child star of the Johnny has always wanted to attend BYU, not only because he is LDS, but also because of BYU's impressive academic record. Now that he has started classes, he thinks the "Y" is a "super neat place to study"

Johnny enjoys the recognition he receives on campus. In particular, he likes dinner invitations from girls in the Heritage Halls or off-campus for "good old home

He doesn't, however, enjoy it when people approach him and say, "Hi, do you remember me?" He wishes he could know everyone who knows him, but sometimes girls expect him to remember them from a visit to their stake four years ago. He says he never forgets a face, but is so terrible with names that once he even forgot

Johnny has experienced many of the typical freshman hassles, and his run-in with dress standards was a rather embarrassing introduction to college life. He had his hair cut a week before he left home, but because of the long lines at the Marriott Center, was unable to have his activity card picture taken until almost two and one-half weeks later. Before he got to the camera, he was led gently to one side and asked if he knew about BYU standards. Johnny says his hair grows quickly, but "I didn't think it was really all that long."

He disappeared into the men's room and desperately tried to comb the red curls behind his ears, not a particularly easy task with his hair style. When he felt he had done all he could, he went back to the photographer who seemed satisfied and, in fact, snapped a few extra souvenir pictures for nieces and an letters and gifts arrive frequently at his room in seret Towers. Three flowers arrived Wednesday with a note which read "We're sorry to hear about your five tests today. Our thoughts are with you. Deepest regrets."

He has also received two letters on fancy stationery from the "Pink Fox," an anonymous admirer who signs off with a big kiss.

A humanities major, Johnny says movie acting will always be his main livelihood, but diplomatic relations will probably be a sideline. He is concerned with the importance of meaningful communication and his personal philosophy emphasizes "understanding with the heart as well as the mind."

"In order for the Lord's work to come about, we have to communicate with everybody," says Johnny. "Knowing the church is world-wide is what gets me really excited."

Johnny feels the media is one of the greatest tools the Lord can use. He believes it is through the media that the church is really going to grow since everyone watches TV or goes to the movies.

He loves languages and is "fairly" fluent in French, Spanish and sign language. His background in French comes from the opportunity he had to speak the language every day on the set of "Napoleon and Samantha," together with further study in junior and high school. His father, a returned missionary from Uruguay, taught all his children Spanish at a very early age. Johnny is the fifth child in a family of five girls and three boys.

He doesn't have any formal training in the language of the deaf, but often sits in front of the Marriott Center with deaf friends at forum assemblies where he is encouraged to learn more signs.

A minor in theatrical arts and cinematography is what Johnny would like, but he plans on taking his graduate degree in France or somewhere where he can learn European styles of film and incorporate them into his own feelings about the art.

During his first freshman semester, Johnny is carrying 18-1/2 credit hours with classes in math, French, photography, physics, modern dance, health, business management and Doctrine & Covenants. He studies anywhere from five to 10 hours daily, not counting class

Has his acting career interfered with schooling? Actually, it has been a help, says Johnny. Under California law, anyone under 18 and working must have three

"You have to be able to concentrate solidly on one subject for a short period of time and understand what you are talking about, and then go back out and do something else," he says.

However, many acting assignments took place during summer vacations; so Johnny was able to attend a regular junior high and high school.

Johnny was "discovered" while singing "I am a Child of God" in a Primary program at a Sacrament meeting in San Fernando, Cal. A woman who recognized his talent approached Johnny's mother and suggested she take her son to an agent. Mrs. Whitaker replied that she didn't want to ruin her child, but decided to make an appointment so it could never be said he didn't have the chance.

Johnny had that interview on Hollywood Boulevard and landed his first job as a 3-year-old car salesman for OK Used Cars. Since that time, he has appeared in several commercials, including audio and visual productions for the church. His television appearances have included spots on "Slattery's People," "A Day in Court" and "Divorce Court." He was also a regular on "General Hospital" for a year and a half.

"The last two years, I've gone through the worst times in my life — spiritually," he says. He has had several offers to do movies he knows he shouldn't or won't do because of conflicts with church standards.

Johnny would like to serve a two-year mission for the church in Russia and will study Russian next semester if he is on campus. There is a strong possibility he will begin work in January on "State Tournament," a movie about high school basketball, which would take him away from Provo.

Animals of all kinds contribute to the pageantry and spectical of Ringling Brothers-Barnum and Bailey's "Greatest Show on Earth."

Circus Magic' concludes

Not only do the felines listen to the voice of Gebel-Williams, but throughout the night horses and elephants obey his commands. Leaving Tarzan swinging in the trees of jungle movies, Gebel-Williams abandons the traditional circus animal manuevers and with the command of his voice, he leads the entire elephant herd and circus company through "Elephant Disco." It's hard to imagine Johnny Weismiller and the wilds of Africa while watching a herd of two-ton elephants months and years of training to teach each animal his name, his place, my voice and my commands." Ringling Brothers-Barnum & Bailey whisk As the opening production number fades into the wings, the center of this huge three-ring circus becomes the new focus of awe and expectation. A host of 15 leopards, 3 panthers and 2 pumas prance to the crack of the whip of Gunther Gebel-Williams, the "Lord of the Rings." The hum of an anxious crowd slips into silence as the lights go out in the Salt Palace arena. Children wiggle to the edge of their seats and Mom and Dad lean forward, straining to see the anticipated spectacle. Suddenly, the stab of a spotlight tears open the dark curtain, revealing a man in a sequin-spattered tuxedo. Waves of excitement ripple through the crowd and the ringmaster crewd and the ringmaster crew, "Presenting ... the greatest show on earth!"

hai woman seeks treedon By EVELYNE F. WHITE Monday Magazine Writer

In Thailand, the man acts as the front leg in society. The woman is considered to be the supporter, or back leg. Trying to secure firmer footage on higher ground is BYU graduate student Natha Fungladda, 23, from

Though Natha enjoys the freedom from her elders, she still clings to the lessons they taught her. Children are totally supported by their parents till schooling is complete or they are married. In return, the children care for their parents during illness and old age. The abundance of nursing homes in America perplexes Natha.

In her quest for freedom, Natha has also learned to be an individual. Here to pursue a masters degree in botany, she hopes to work in ecological research upon graduation. Natha's American education will be of great value in Thailand, where most women are not given an opportunity for a college education. Once graduated from high school, they are expected to marry and stay at home. Thai women who do continue their studies have a more difficult time finding a suitable marriage partner, for Thai men do not like their women educated than they are, fearing it threatens

Because higher education among Thai women is so uncommon, America has become the land of opportunity for Natha. Her native country does not have enough good graduate schools nor is it technologically advanced in the various science fields. Natha hopes to gain fluency in English, an asset in the Thai job market, during her BYU studies.

"In my country, we have a saying," quotes Natha, "Older people take a bath in warm water, before us." Older people are supposed to know more because they have experienced life, she explains. Young people in Thailand are directly ordered to obey all instructions

"In the United States everyone seems equal," says Natha, "but in my country, for example, if an older person sits on the floor, so must you. Otherwise, you would be sitting in a more elevated position than they are." Thais are taught everything step-by-step, according to their age. The words of elders are strictly

Young people in Thailand are directly ordered to obey all instructions from their elders and are not free to think for themselves as Americans are.

She is still uncomfortable in American dating situations. In her native country, young people are escorted by a relative on dates, which usually take place during the daytime; night life is reserved for married couples.

People who have a "thing" against herbalism should not read this book. People who have a "thing" for herbalism should not read this book. People who enjoy good writing should not read this book.

The natural question that follows is: Who should read this book? The answer: No one who has passed the Dick and Jane series of first grade readers. What the author lacks in writing skills, he compounds with a lack of facts.

crystal, the manner in which he ought to heal himself."

"Thus, it seems that a combination of both, the scriptures from holy writ and a vivid recollection of a bitter past, served to incline his mind towards herbal medicine for sure, and away from medical science for definite."

BOOK TALK

"Joseph Smith and Herbal Medicine" is nothing more than innuendos and conjecture written in the language and grammar of a first grade primer. If Mr. Heinerman ever writes a mystery, you'll probably find out that Spot did it and ran.

"To be more pronounced about the matter in discussion: He (the Lord) had allowed for certain plants to be used as medicine in the constitution and nature of man. He never said one word about the drugs obtained through chemical science. He was speaking in a botanical sense, when He gave the commandment to the church, to be observed by all, if they so chose to do."

Mr. Heinerman does give his book ecclesiastical verification by quoting generously from the journal of Priddy Meeks. What? You've never heard of Priddy Meeks? Neither had this writer until he read Mr. Heinerman's book.

Through pure hearsay, Mr. Heinerman concludes that Joseph Smith despised medical physicians and was treated throughout his life by herbalists. The author blames medical doctors for the death of Brigham Young and puts the "revelation" of herbal medicine on the same plane as the restoration of the wholesome herbs God hath ordained for the constitu-tion, nature, and use of man—Every herb in the season thereof, and every fruit in the season thereof; all these to be used with prudence and thanksgiving."

He then proceeds to define what the Lord meant when he said "herb" and "fruit," with the aid of the dictionary. He then further clarifies the issue with the following paragraph:

Herbal medicine, as presented by Mr. Heinerman, might not be so hard to swallow (no pun intended) if there was the slightest evidence of scholarship in his writing. The following quotes are typical of his creative writing ability:

Can teaching BYU voice students be half as exciting as performing on a Vienna opera stage? It is for Madame Vera Rozsa, Hungarian born mezo soprano.

She's been on campus this past week giving private lessons and masters' classes. She will appear Tuesday at 8 p.m. in the Madsen Recital Hall in a joint concert with BYU's internationally known concert pianist, Reid Nibley.

As a young girl, she began to sing for simple the joy of it. Even so young, her voice rang out with clarity that attracted people to her. "I'm a natural performer. When I practiced as a child I always had to have my mother or someone in the room to listen," she smiles. As a child in Budapest, Hungary, Vera Rozsa lived in a home where both parents were teachers. When her mother brought home papers each night to grade, Vera would play the piano in the same room so she could be with the mother she adored. At 12, frustration prompted Vera to announce to her school teacher one day, "I can't be naughty at home because my parents are always so busy so I decided that I would be throughout her childhood was to be a conductor of an orchestra-"until I saw a woman conducting. It was ridiculous, a woman conductor." She laughs at the memory. Always in the recesses of her mind Vern knew that she could sing.

She didn't even want the teaching degree that she received at the end of seven years of study at the Academie in Budapest. "Everyone in Hungary had a teaching degree. That didn't mean I wanted to teach," she recalls.

When she was in the Academie her friends came to her for help. "I loved to help them but I didn't realize that it was teaching, she says. Vera's talent for teaching, from the somber Italian to the "show your teeth method."

When in her early 20's Vera was invited to vienna, Austria for an opera performance. At that time Hungary was under Communist rule and it was difficult to receive permission to leave. Because the minister of culture was a great lover of music and Vera's talent in particular, she was allowed to go. While in Vienna, Vera auditioned and was asked to join the opera.

Getting breaks in the fields of opera singing was especially difficult for the newly arrived young star.

One evening Vera was asked if she knew the lead part of an opera because the lead singer was sick. "Yes!" she cried, and rushed out to find a copy and study it. She got the part and transfixed the audience. Her future husband, a British soldier, was in the audience that night and came backstage to meet her, beginning their courtship.

As I got up to sing, I couldn't control the notes at all," she laughs.

When BYU International Folk Dancers toured Europe this summer, their-banjo player Michael Van Slooten contracted the "kissing disease," mononucleosis. Now several weeks later, Mike is out of commission and unable to continue playing in the blue grass band. Why did Mike get mono in Europe? Was it because of the rigorous, sleepless schedule he kept? Did he kiss someone who had the virus? What can doctors do to aid his recovery?

just beginning to answer these questions. Slowly, the misconceptions about mono are being corrected.

Chances are you had what is popularly known as the "kissing disease" before you ever had your first kiss.

Science and medical profession

Mono can be transferred by kissing, but you could kiss until doomsday and never get mono unless the chemistry is right.

Lack of sleep and being rundown do, however, make an individual more susceptible to mono.

The disease does not have either a medical cure or means of prevention.

medicine today as polio was during its rage in the 1940's. There are similarities, such as the fact that neither an epidemic of polio nor mono has ever occurred in a city, in a dorm on campus, or even among roommates. Doctors don't know why some individuals get it more severely than others and they haven't been able to determine why the physical body become susceptible to it.

Dr. Cloyd Hofheins, director of the Student Health Center, explains, "Mononucleosis follows no pattern as far as who gets it and the seriousness of the illness can vary greatly from one individual to another."

Much is heard about students who are totally incapacitated and must often go home to recover. However, there are many who feel tired and somewhat exhausted, but are able to go on with their activities.

One student, after consulting a doctor and testing positive for mono, went on a BYU survival trip. He had mono when he left, but after a month of physical trials, returned without it. His doctor did not tell him he had the disease, but said if he felt good enough to go, to go ahead. This seems to indicate that time alone may sometimes be all that is necessary to overcome the disease.

The term "mono" is of-ten used as a "catch-all" phrase for several un-determined viruses.

cent develop mononucleosis.
Studies by Dr. Paul Edmonds, a retired BYU Health Center physician and surgeon, show that there are different strains of mono in varying parts of the country and world.

It is rare to get mono twice, though you can catch a second strain of mono. Students who come to BYU from other parts of the country are more likely to get mono while thery are here than students from Utah.

Although mono presently has no cure, according to Dr. Hofheins, a vaccine could possibly be developed. However, he says, it may never come to pass while there are more serious diseases like cancer to worry about.

The hormone cortisone is often used to help mono victims carry on with his everyday activities without pain until their own bodies can overcome the infection.

Mono is not a deadly illness, but ask anyone who had it and they will say,

"It's a real drag." Gary Groesbeck, a senior in pre-med recalls, "The only exciting thing about having mono was telling my girl friend and seeing the look on her face."

BYU will win the WAC. Have a 11-0 record. Finish the year ranked in the nation's top five. Have a team member win the Heisman. And spend December eating raw fish heads and rice.

So was the the chatter of sports writers from Albuquerque N.M., Associated Press and a member of the Tangerine Bowl selection committee Friday evening in the BYU

"I don't know who started the rumor around here that the rumor around isn't interested in teams repeating their trip to Orlando," stated Vern Hinely, of the Tangerine Bowl Association.

"We were more than pleased with Brigham Young in the Tangerine Bowl last year, and were impressed with the support they had from their church members in the Orlando area. There is no question they (BYU) can draw a crowd and play in a number of bowls. They are one of twelve teams we have been looking at this year.

"When I called to confirm my reservations for this trip, the office told me about BYU and Japan. I couldn't believe it! I decided to come anyway," explained Hinely, who assured the media that he did not make the 3,500-mile trip just to see Mt. Timpanogos.

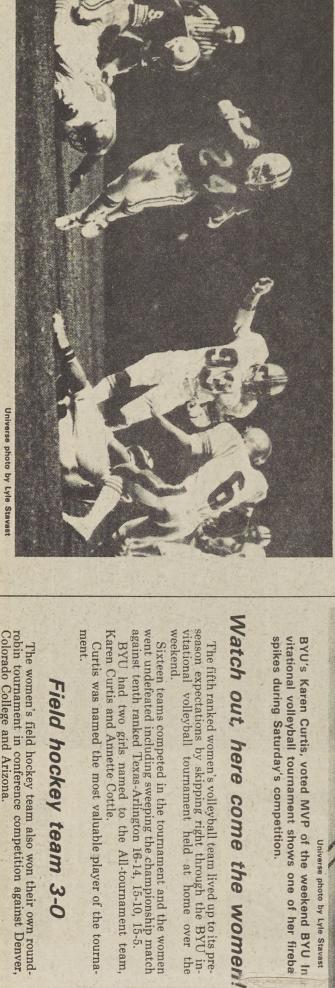

Factors in BYU favor

Hinley said the Tangerine Bowl committee has not committed itself to any of the twelve teams. He explained the factors that would be in BYU's favor to return by adding, "BYU would have an excellent chance to come back if they were to have another 9-2 season, which I believe they can do. Also important is the national ranking and how well quarterback Gifford Nielsen does during the season."

smoking as he stuck it Nielsen's gun was still back in his holster.

Four hours later Hinely was glad he had a ticket stub. He had received his show. Hinely was so excited about Gifford Nielsen, he had trouble talking in the cold autumn air.

With five minutes remaining in the third quarter Nielsen trotted for the sideline, a common sight as of late. Nielsen's gun was still smoking as he stuck it back in his holster, but the damage was done. The scoreboard read 47-0. Twenty-five percent of the 23 passes he had tossed ended up in the end zone, a fact that made Frank Maestas of the Albuquerque Journal cry, "I don't mind them scoring 91 points if we could make at least 20."

Sixteen teams competed in the tournament and the women went undefeated including sweeping the championship match against tenth ranked Texas-Arlington 16-14, 15-10, 15-5.

BYU had two girls named to the All-tournament team, Karen Curtis and Annette Cottle.

BYU's Roger Gourley takes a screen pass from Gifford Nielsen and sprints down field behind superb blocking for the Cougar's initial touchdown. The score was the second time in two weeks BYU has put points on the board their first possession. The play was good for 64-yards.

In the next quarter he got his wish as BYU, out of mercy, gave them a few bulbs to light on their side of the board.

'You're number one!'

Maestas later said that BYU was better than Colorado and Texas Tech, two teams the Lobos have played the last two weeks. They currently are ranked sixth and 13th, respectively. Maestas, determined to show his sincerity, vowed that this week he would list BYU "number one" on his ballot for the wire poll.

UNM Head Coach Bill Mondt, who just witnessed the most points ever scored against him, agreed in part by saying, "We just couldn't handle them. They did things we knew were coming and they did them well. BYU is by far the most explosive team we've faced. No question about that."

He also said if Gifford Nielsen isn't a pro prospect, "there aren't any."

Besides Nielsen only getting three grass stains on his Gourley finally got to show some of the speed that brought him fame as a sprinter at Provo High School. He took a screen pass from Nielsen on BYU's second play of the game and accelerated 64-yards to pay dirt. Taking advantage of the new NCAA rule that allows linemen to block down field on a screen pass, Gourley found the hole prepared by Cougar trenchmen on the right side, and shifting gears, left Lobo defensive back Smokey Turman smoldering in the wind as he whistled by. BYU wide receivers Mike Chronister and John VanDerWouden also executed beautiful blocks on the pants, which is no news, there were some sterling performances Friday night. Cougar runningback Roger Todd Christensen continued shaking up bones by taking advantage of the Lobo blitz on Nielsen and rushed for 34 yards on 11 carries. He broke frail arm tackles and bowled over Lobo defensive men with his distinctive brand of velocity.

Cougars stopped UNM cold right from the start, forcing the Lobos to lose the ball on two fumbles and an interception. WAC rushing leader Mike Williams was held to 69-yards.

Dev Duke continued his brilliant kicking game by keeping the ball away from New Mexico's dangerous return men.

In the BYU locker room, members of the football team pause for a word of prayer with Head Coach Lavell Edwards. Prayer is an important part of all BYU athletics — both in the stands and locker room.

Soccer team downs Denver 4-0

The Cougar's all-time leading goal kicker Brig Ord scored three goals Saturday against Denver, to lead BYU's soccer team to a 4-0 victory over the guests from the "Mile High City." The BYU soccer team is now 6-4 on the season and are scheduled to meet number one ranked San Francisco this Tuesday evening at 7:30 p.m., Haws Field.

The women's field hockey team also won their own round-robin tournament in conference competition against Denver, Colorado College and Arizona.

They defeated Denver 5-0 and Colorado College 2-0 before finishing off Arizona.

Tight end Todd Thompson put salt in the wound by picking up an on-sides kick and returning it 45-yards for a TD to make it 54-19, helping BYU maintain NCAA dominance in scoring offense. Thompson also collected 89 yards on four receptions, including a 39-yard TD bomb from Nielsen. The sure handed junior proyed to Cougar opponents that it is not healthy to double cover BYU's wide receivers and blitz Nielsen at the same time. Coach Scovil's "technicians" have maneuvers too complicated to allow such strategy.

No interceptions

Nielsen has yet to be intercepted or play a whole game this year.

BYU had 21 first downs to the Lobo's 21, 80 yards rushing to 206 for New Mexico, 302 yards passing to UNM's 177. The Cougars, as a team completed 23 of 27 passes. The NCAA offense leaders had 382 yards total, nearly 200 short of their average.

The Cougars will travel to Corvallis this week to meet Oregon State.
